COLOUR ENGRAINED IN THE MIND describes the rationale behind user-friendly computer profiling tests that analyse peoples' best attributes and hidden talents. Projective colours and gestalts have been researched over many years, and the history of the projective symbolism has been followed from the earliest clinical psychiatry to the present day, enriched by seeing it in the context of the history of art, zeitgeist and aesthetics. Special emphasis has been based on the four Jungian psychological functions, leading to the concept of the sublimation of vices into virtues, through the use of the profiling test ProMICAD.
