CAMBIO POLITICO, DESAFECCION Y ELECCIONES EN AMERICA LATINA Rosa Conde e Isabel Wences

Entre 2012 y 2014 han tenido lugar en América Latina 14 elecciones presidenciales. Con excepción de Argentina, Guatemala, Nicaragua y Perú, todos los países de la región han tenido un proceso electoral presidencial que, en la mayoría de los casos, ha supuesto un cambio importante en la política del país, con el consiguiente impacto en el conjunto de la región. En el libro que ahora presentamos se analiza el cambio político a la luz de los resultados electorales en el contexto de la situación política, económica y social en que se han desarrollado los comicios en los respectivos países. Se trata de entender cómo los resultados se han visto afectados por el sistema de partidos, el régimen de gobierno, la conformación de alianzas o coaliciones, el sistema y el comportamiento electoral, la confianza en las instituciones y la desafección. Más allá de estos elementos básicos, los seminarios -reflejados ahora en los distintos capítulos del libro- pretendían explorar la cercanía o lejanía de los ciudadanos a la política y los políticos, la aparición eventual de crisis institucionales y todos aquellos elementos que ponen de manifiesto el estado de la democracia y su calidad en cada uno de los países considerados. En definitiva, esta obra colectiva pretende dibujar el nuevo mapa político de América Latina tras este ciclo electoral
