As the son of Hades, Roaden was fated with the burden of the dead. Cursed by his grandmother Demeter to have the face of death and isolation, Roaden accepted this fate and hoped to avoid the demons that drove his father Hades to kidnap mother. Roaden embraced his lineage and emerged his being in helping the living by keeping the ghouls, the ghosts and the wandering dead in their place with human group called The Fold. Seraphin Drear, the daughter of the powerful Drear family, is dying. Her famous Doctor father who is known to be healer cannot save her. Sera is raised in a safe community, a community surrounded by a high wall that keeps them safe from the wandering dead and other unwanted influential worldly experiences, leaving the younger inhabitants feeling restricted and curious for life beyond their sheltered existence. Seraphin is one of them. Wanting to see the world before she dies.

One night Sera sneaks over the wall to take a short cut to a gathering her peers secretly meet to talk about the outside world and even the forbidden Necromancy that is performed. On her way she is confronted by a wandering dead child. The child attacks and Sera is paralyzed with fear, until Roaden intervenes.

One glance at Sera and Roaden is consumed by need and want completely foreign to him. Now he confronts the intense desire to do what it takes to keep Seraphin, to give in to this one temptation or fight to be the person he has wanted to always prove himself to be.
