A subtle convergence of faith, hope, and love takes place as three seemingly unconnected lives intertwine in ways they couldn't have imagined...

A feel good novel that can be as gritty as it is heartwarming...

Thirty-something Kallie Molloy enjoys a nice life in sunny San Diego, California; a downtown condo, a decent job, and a good man. Without warning, her world quickly begins to unravel until the only option available to her is an unexpected job offer from a soccer club in Minnesota. The offer stirs up mixed emotions from her past, but taking a leap of FAITH might be the only path to a fresh start.

After one tragic night sent his life into a tailspin and feeling overwhelmed by the constant, plaguing reminders of a life that no longer existed, pro soccer players' agent, Chris Bedford quietly ran from his life in tiny Northfield, Minnesota to the anonymity of Chicago. Now, years later, for his daughter's sake, he nervously contemplates their return to Northfield, the same place that left him hopeless.

Retired attorney and unassuming widower, Stanley Beckham, occupies his days managing The Study, a bookstore-coffee shop inspired by his late wife. Not only a wildly popular local favorite, it's also how he keeps her spirit alive. Though he enjoys serving patrons of all kinds, he starts to wonder if it's where he's truly supposed to be. Is he honoring the lost LOVE of his life or is he merely hiding in the backdrop?

The answer may lie within the last gift she ever gave him...
