The fourth novel from acclaimed, award-winning author Ginny L. Yttrup. When betrayal's flames explode, can Jessica Weaver preserve what matters most?

As a fire archeologist, preserving Yosemite National Park's natural and cultural resources is Jessica's job. As a wife and mother, preserving her family's legacy is her obsession. But when she discovers her husband's infidelity, betrayal's flames threaten her family and all she's fought to protect.

Haley Weaver, a sophomore in high school, is a daddy's girl. As she enters the throes of first love, timid yet intrigued, Haley also discovers her father's affair. Stunned and broken, Haley flees into the wilds of Yosemite National Park. If she can't trust her father, how can she trust her boyfriend—or even love itself?

When wildfire breaks out and Haley is missing, Jessica fears the worst. In a race against time, she searches for her daughter as she deals with the magnitude of what her husband's affair may cost her family. How can she go on if she doesn't find Haley in time?

And what will Jessica do to preserve the legacy that matters most?
