Six medieval women by Andrea Hopkins Although the Middle Ages is thought to have been a repressive era, medieval women actually enjoyed more freedom and opportunities than in any subsequent century except our own. In this book, scholar Andrea Hopkins sheds light on the wide diversity of experience open to medieval women through the stories of six remarkable lives: Hildegard of Bingen -- legendary abbess, scientist, composer, and mystic; Eleanor of Aquitaine -- queen, crusader, and patron of the arts; Margaret Paston -- quintessential medieval wife and mother; Christine de Pisan -- influential writer on the role of women; Joan of Arc -- visionary and warrior; and Margery Kempe -- religious convert and pilgrim. Hopkins uses the words of each woman to bring their stories to life. Color and black-and-white illustrations. 160pp. Hardcover.
